Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under

Art Unit: 1714

37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1, 2, 4, 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over SCHOLL (US 6,025,415) in view of YAGI (JP 2000178379).

The prior art of SCHOLL discloses composition for tire treads (col. 7, line 56). The composition comprises rubber that includes a diene rubber and fillers (col. 5, lines 40-50). The fillers are selected from silicas, silicates, glass fibers and metal oxides and hydroxides such as alumina hydroxide (col. 5, lines 1-31).

Additives include plasticizers, tackifiers, processing oils wherein the latter one is also a softener (col. 6, lines 55-60 and col. 2, lines 52-57). The specification of SCHOLL further teaches use of carbon black (col. 6, lines 41-51) and silane coupling agents.

The difference between the present invention and the disclosure of SCHOLL is recitation of particle size and amount of aluminum hydroxide in tire tread.

With respect to the above argument, the prior art of YAGI discloses composition for tire tread comprising diene rubber, silica, carbon black and aluminum hydroxide. In the composition of YAGI aluminum hydroxide is utilized in amount of 5-30 pbw and has particle size in a range of 0.1-10 microns.

Aluminum hydroxide having properties as disclosed in the abstract of YAGI is suitable for use in tire treads to provide tread with excellent grip resistance.

Art Unit: 1714

In the light of the above disclosure, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the instant invention to utilize the aluminum hydroxide of YAGI in the composition of SCHOLL and thereby obtain tire tread of the present invention. Selection of a known material based on its suitability for its intended use supports prima facie obviousness. Sinclair & Carroll Co vs. Interchemical Corp. 325 U.S. 327, 65 USPQ 297 (1945).

Applicant's arguments with respect to the final rejection will not be addressed since the rejections of record as presented in this office action are different.
